

LIMITED HITS AUTO AND ENGINE IS DERAILED

John Pianca, 23 years old, 624 Cass Street, Joliet, had a close call from death Monday night when his auto became stalled on the Rock Island railroad crossing at Gougar's crossing as the first section of the Golden State Limited was rushing westward. Mr. Pianca just had time enough to leap to safety when the huge locomotive hit the car a Plymouth coupe and carried it half a mile down the track before the train could be stopped. In some manner the wrecked car was crumpled up under the engine. Parts of the wreckage under the engine derailed the pony trucks. So tangled did the debris become with the rails and engine that it was necessary to employ acetylene torches to burn away the wreckage before the train could proceed to Joliet.

Other westbound trains were rerouted over the east bound main at New Lenox to Joliet. Traffic was delayed for several hours.

Gougar's crossing is west of New Lenox.

Midlothian Lions Sponsor Ladies Night

The Midlothian Lions Club held a Ladies Night meeting Monday evening in their headquarters in the former Woman's Club Building which the Midlothian Lions recently took over. There was a very nice attendance and a wholesome jovial spirit prevailed. Lion President Hickey presided.

Songs, music and addresses provided a very interesting program.

District Governor Schless of Downers Grove gave a fine talk on the need of Lionism today. He pointed out that high civic ideals are needed. He gave some interesting figures showing that four million persons in the United States make their living thru racketeering and other crime and that the country loses annually fifteen billions of dollars thru crime.

Tinley Lions Club was represented by A. O. Foskett who fathered the Midlothian Club and who gave an appropriate address. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Semmler also were present. Mr. Semmler is a member of the Tinley Park Lions Club and also made a few remarks. A very sumptuous dinner was served. Everyone had a wonderful time.

Despite hard times the Midlothian Lions have acquired their own club house and were commended by the Lion District Governor, for this fine spirit of progress and faith in the future.

To the Public

We of the Frankfort Federal Re-employment Service (CWA) had nothing to do with the choice of any individual any labor assignment of this vicinity. Our duty was to register which we tried to do in a fair and impartial manner.

We displayed no favoritism or granted no special privilege. We never made any recommendation as to the eligibility of any individual to assignment at any time, except one, to our Joliet main office.

That exception was Andrew Eisenbrandt, a veteran, who had automatic preference as such by our U. S. Government and he was in reality a substitution for a man who had refused his card of assignment.

Any abuses or unfortunate mistakes that crept in were therefore not our fault and we disclaim any responsibility. We have tried to be of service to our community and have received some blame for the general result. That blame rests squarely on other shoulders than ours.

We take this means of advising our public of the facts and any of the above can easily be verified by only a superficial investigation of our acts. We would in fact welcome that happening.

WOLF ROAD CASE TO BE DISPOSED OF DEC. 28TH

The Wolf road right of way condemnation suit case will be finally disposed of December 28th according to the ruling of Judge Wynn Knoch of DuPage County who has been hearing the case.

Wednesday morning the question carried over from last week as to whether or not the Will County right of way committee was asking for more land thru the Cleveland farm than is needed for the Wolf road right of way came up in county court, but Attorney Wm. D. Heise, asked for a continuance on the plea that Mr. Cleveland was ill and could not appear in court. Judge Knoch granted a continuance to December 27 with 1 day of grace and ruled that the case would be disposed of on December 28th whether Mr. Cleveland is in court or not.

Soon as a disposition of the case is made the matter of determining the damages to be paid Mr. Cleveland by the county will be considered by the jury on January 3rd.

Farmers Union Hold Mass Meeting

The Farmers Educational and Co-operative Union of Illinois held a mass meeting at the St. Mary hall in Mokena on Monday evening, December 18th.

The attendance was not large, but a representative gathering of interested farmers from this vicinity.

The meeting was opened by Niles Cagwin, chairman who introduced Fred Wolf, state president. James H. Frey, local organizer, closed the discussion.

Mr. Wolf, himself a "dirt farmer" gave a very interesting review of farmer organization work during the past several years, recounting obstacles encountered and stressing the necessity of determined co-operative endeavor that the farmers rights might be secured and protected at this time.

The speaker presented his arguments fluently, indicating a thorough knowledge of his subject. Without undue condemnation, impressing his hearers with his evidence of sincerity, he unhesitatingly placed the blame for unfulfilled promises, specifically backed up by facts and figures sparing no individual or group responsible for the farmers present plight. The address was non-political in character and as a whole the subject matter and conclusions drawn were worthy of careful consideration.

Chairman Cagwin and organizer Frey made clear the mode of procedure and requirements in attaining membership in the organization and numbers remained at the close of the meeting to acquaint themselves with all details. Intense interest was apparent.

Another meeting will be held in the town hall on Wednesday evening, December 27th.

The chairman announced that gatherings would be held in every township in Will County in January with general headquarters for the campaign at Joliet.

The cantata will be presented Sunday evening, December 24th at 7:30 o'clock. The public is invited.

Keep Old School Advice of Maue

The question of tearing the old school house down at Mokena has been of much concern to the Mokena board of school directors and the matter was taken up with county superintendent of schools August Maue who has advised the school directors as follows:

"Regarding the sale of your school house. Experience in every district in which the old school-house was sold or torn down has been that very soon thereafter the building was needed for regular school purposes.

"My judgment is just as I told you sometime ago that you should retain the building as it is, where it is. The shifting in population has been very rapid in many places. It may be that they may begin to come to Mokena soon. If that should happen, you will need the building."

"If the high school develops as it should, you will need two rooms in the present building. One grade teacher could be shifted to the old building very nicely. Every time I come to your school I think that that should be done even with your present attendance.

"The building in the district which was united with yours has no value for school purposes.

"I enclose a petition for your use hoping that it will not be used. If the old building is an eyesore, it is worth while to put it into shape so that no one's senses will be injured by it.

CWA Force Busy On Tinley Projects

The past week has been one of much activity in Tinley Park as the local CWA projects got under way. Streets are being repaired and properly drained. The street crossing north of the J. C. Funk store has been torn up and is being repaired. About sixty men are engaged on local project work. Not all of these men are from Tinley, many coming from other towns and some of the local men are sent to other towns on other projects.

Frank Roeker, and former police chief Terry of Midlothian are foremen of the local gangs. More men are expected to be put on next week.

Carrier Served 32 yrs.

Paul Rinke, Jr., who will be retired from service January 1st has served the Mokena post office as rural mail carrier for 32 years.

BUY LAND FOR S. W. HIGHWAY RIGHT OF WAY

Ray Smith, right of way man for the Cook County Highway Department has been in Orland Township the past few weeks securing the dedication of right of way for the Southwest Highway from Alpine to Orland Park. Right of way has been secured thru the Gee Farm, C. F. Colcord's property, George Young, and Wm. Kolmann's land. The report is $4000 was paid for right of way thru the Young farm. Mr. Colcord is also to be paid $1500 for a house standing on the site of the proposed highway. It is understood that the building is to be removed within sixty days.

Use World's Fair Busses on CWA Job

A CWA force of about 250 men have been at work on 183rd Street southeast of Tinley Park the past week building earth shoulders and cleaning ditches. Most of these men are from Chicago or nearby suburbs and have been transported to and from their work in the big Greyhound busses which were used inside the World's Fair grounds during the summer. These busses have been equipped with side curtains and are serving well as a means of transportation as about 100 men can be hauled at one time.

Tinley M. E. to Hold Xmas Program In School Auditorium

The Christmas Festival of the Tinley Park M. E. church Sunday school will be held on Saturday, December 23rd at 8 p. m. in the auditorium of the Tinley Park Public School. A beautiful Christmas tree will add its peculiar charm to the splendid program, which will be given by the scholars and teachers of the Sunday school under the direction of the Sunday school supt. Clare Gardner. The program will consist of songs, recitations, dialogues and two playlets and will find its culminating point for the children in the distribution of Christmas candies. This will be a splendid entertainment, which you cannot afford to miss. The Sunday School wishes all readers of this announcement together with the parents of the scholars and all friends a "Very Blessed Christmas and Happy New Year." The pastor of the church also extends a hearty invitation to attend Christmas services at the church on Sunday, December 24, at 9 a. m.

Christmas Gifts

CHRISTMAS celebrates the birth of Jesus, the Way-Shower, who brought to mankind the gift of gifts love for God and man and the tokens of man's true health, life, and holiness. Cherishing his spiritual sonship above all else, Jesus never allowed what is called human nature to hinder his manifestation of the divine nature. Thus he stands as the Exemplar whose holy appearing not only blessed his contemporaries, but also foreshadows the new birth for one and all, since with the birth of Jesus came the birth of Christianity.

During the world's merry-making at the Christmas season it is well to weigh values and to reach out still

ILLINOIS
State News

The first case on record in Rock Island of an arrest for riding a bicycle while intoxicated was made by police. A. V. Lind was seized after he had wobbled his bicycle for several blocks, scaring pedestrians. Lind escaped with a fine of $1, imposed by Judge J. T. Bauer.

Dr. J. F. Corbin, physician, died in Galesburg after a ten weeks' illness. He was born in Knox county and had been a practicing physician for 37 years.

Gen. George E. Leach, chief of the National Guard bureau, reported to Secretary of War Dorn that $484,080 had been spent to maintain Illinois' slightly undermanned guard units during the fiscal year which ended July 1, 1933. Leach said there were 180 men less in the guard during 1933 than authorized. Enlistment was 9,422. The state was permitted 697 commissioned officers, but had only 653. The authorized eleven warrant officers were employed. The One Hundred Eighth squadron and photo section of Illinois put in 1,497.3 flying hours, his report said. Expenditures were for maintaining guard, $474,495; training, $9,369; equipment, $215.

Harry B. Mapes, thirty-five years old, was shot and killed by Clyde Yeagley, eighteen years old, at the home of the latter in the east portion of Elgin, which lies in Cook county. Yeagley and his mother, Mrs. Frances Yeagley, forty years old, a divorcee, were held by state police for Cook county officials.

As part of Governor Horner's plan to restore the important historical landmarks of Illinois, work has been started on the old state capitol at Vandalia, and on the old state house at Springfield. Thus Illinois is adding two of its former capitol buildings to the already numerous memorials to Abraham Lincoln. Unemployed men are being used in the restoration projects. The old capitol building at Vandalia will be made both inside and outside exactly as it was a century ago. It was at Vandalia that Lincoln began his career as a lawmaker, riding to the sessions on horseback from his home at New Salem. Here he made his first official protest against slavery. Soon after his election, Lincoln, as one of the "long nine," composed of two state senators and seven representatives, all of whom were more than six feet in height, succeeded in having the capitol removed to Springfield in 1839.

The will of the late Edward N. Hurley, financier and war time head of the United States shipping board, was admitted to probate by Judge Edgar F. Thoma in the Du Page county Probate court at Wheaton. The estate, estimated at several millions of dollars, was valued "in excess of $250,000" in the petition attached to the will. Bequests in the will are $100,000 to four charities and small specific gifts to relatives, the bulk of the estate being equally divided among Mr. Hurley's daughter and three sons.

Peter Donnelly, who began service in Galena under F. C. Fargo, was retired as local agent for the American Express company. He began in days when deliveries were made in an old-fashioned carpetbag.

Richard Manzer, fifty-six years old, cashier of the Lake Villa Trust & Savings bank, in Lake county, died suddenly of heart disease while attending a neighborhood bankers' meeting in the Merchants & Farmers bank in Grays Lake. He had been connected with the Lake Villa bank for 20 years. His widow, Mrs. Inez Manzer, and a daughter survive.

Illinois Republicans turned their guns on the Roosevelt administration in preparation for the April primaries. At a harmony luncheon in Chicago they attacked the NRA, the monetary policy and interference with the freedom of the press. All local Republican factions, except that headed by former Senator Deneen, were represented, and all took the harmony pledge fervently.

A quarrel between two rival special police officers in East St. Louis over the territory they were guarding, ended in the death of William R. Stricklin, sixty-three. The other officer, Harry L. Michael, fifty-nine, was arrested. He said Stricklin struck him after ordering him to stay out of the latter's beat.

One hundred and nine civil works administration laborers enrolled from those on emergency relief in Pana refused to work because the government and state refused to provide transportation by trucks to and from their work. More than two hundred at Taylorville previously went on strike because the government refused to pay them time for the periods going to and from places of employment.

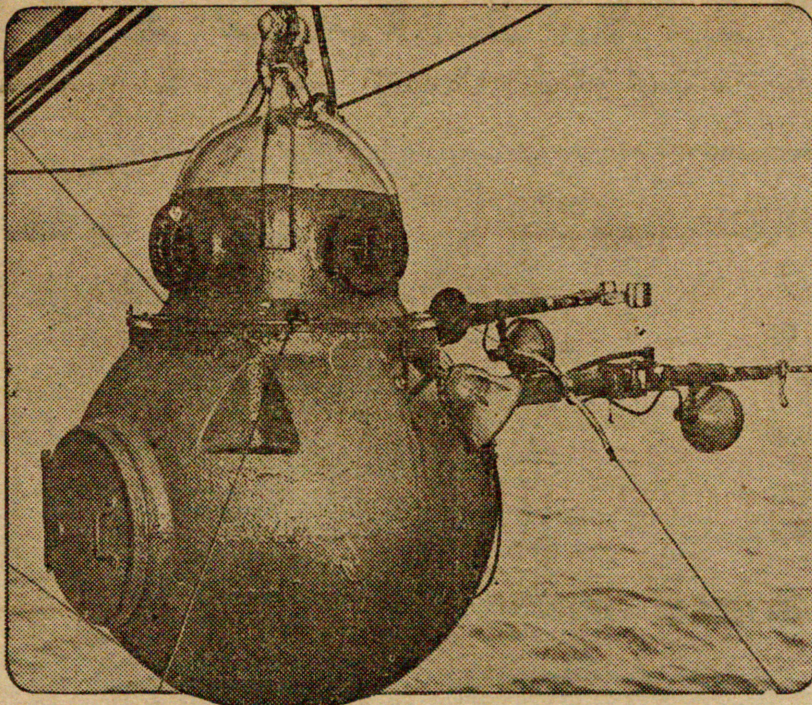

Warren Wockner, twenty-six, was sentenced to life imprisonment in the state penitentiary at Joliet for the kidnapping and robbing of John Sumner, banker of Stockland.

Samuel Trenter, ninety-two, the last survivor of the Civil war in Morris, was buried with military honors. He took part in 32 engagements and was wounded several times.

Ralph T. Newlin of Robinson was given an appointment in the office of the clerk of the Supreme court.

The War department announced it had approved plans for a bridge across the Rock river at Oregon.

Navy Tests a New Diving Bell

CAPT. C. B. MAYO broke all existing navy diving records at Seattle when he descended 400 feet into the waters of Puget sound in a demonstration of the Romano diving bell which marine experts believe will revolutionize existing salvage methods. The bell is the invention of Gene Romano, Seattle mechanical engineer. It is a heavy metal pear-shaped globe capable of withstanding enormous underwater pressure. In the conning tower-like top are glass port holes through which the occupants of the globe, two in number, may observe their manipulations of the articulated arms extending out from it. The dexterity of these is such that a small coin may be picked up with the finger-like claws at the end.

REDDY FOX CALLS ON BILLY MINK

DID you ever try to call on Billy Mink? If so, you know just how difficult it is. Billy is about the hardest person to call on I know of. Of course it wasn't as hard for Reddy Fox as it would be for you or for me, but even Reddy didn't have an easy time of it. He called a number of times before he found Billy. You see, he didn't know exactly where Billy Mink's house was. Billy had managed to keep that a secret. But he did know some of Billy's favorite places and it was one of these that Reddy visited over and over again before he even got a glimpse of Billy.

At last he caught a glimpse of Billy, and putting on his most pleasing manner, called to him. He knew that if Billy didn't choose to stay he could vanish in the twinkling of an eye, and he didn't intend to offend Billy if he could help it. It so happened that Billy was engaged in eating a fat trout, and so for the time being he actually was quiet.

"Ho, Billy Mink!" called Reddy, not drawing too near lest Billy should think his feast was in danger and should run away. "You are just the fellow I want to see."

"Well, here I am. Look at me all you want to," granted Billy rather ungraciously between bites. "But don't come any nearer," he added.

Reddy grinned. "I won't," said he. "I won't, although that fish is a great temptation. It's not your fish but something else I want from you, Billy."

Billy Mink stopped eating long enough to stare at Reddy Fox suspiciously. Seeing that look of suspicion Reddy chuckled. "It is just a little information," said he. "That is all I want—just a little information. I'm sure you will be willing, quite willing, to give me that."

"That depends on what kind of information you want," retorted Billy with great promptness. "There are some things I wouldn't tell you for anything in the world. If it is information about me or any of my affairs you want, you won't get it. I can tell you that right now. Asking will be wasting breath."

Reddy chuckled more than ever. "Just as if I didn't know that, Billy Mink!" he exclaimed. "I wouldn't think of asking you anything personal because I learned long ago that to do a thing like that would be foolish and a waste of time. I have too much respect for your smartness to try a thing like that, even if I wanted to."

Billy Mink looked pleased in spite of his efforts not to. You know it pleases most folks to be thought smart. "If that is the case what is it you want to know?" asked Billy more pleasantly. "I want to know what kind of food Jerry Muskrat eats," replied Reddy. "I want to know what food he is especially fond of. What does he like to store up for winter? Do you know?"

"Of course I know," replied Billy Mink promptly. "It would be funny if I didn't, seeing as much of him as I do. For one thing he is very fond of mussels or fresh-water clams. What do you want to know for, anyway?" Billy looked at Reddy suspiciously.

OPEN CLUBHEAD FOR DEEP BUNKER SHOTS

IN DEEP bunkers with rather precipitous sides the ball should be played off the left foot. Turning the toe of the clubhead to the right, i. e., opening the clubhead, figures largely here in direct ratio to the distance to be covered and the steepness of the banks. The shorter the yardage, the more acute the angle of the bank, the more the clubface should be opened. The body is turned quite left to the line of play and the hands and arms taken back outside the line so that in the downstroke the swing comes in across the ball. The clubhead itself does not actually touch the ball, hit-

BY ANNE CAMPBELL

THEY called it Lost Lake when I was a child. Haunted with mystery, far-off and wild. We never sailed a boat upon its blue. Or fished for bullheads as the children do.

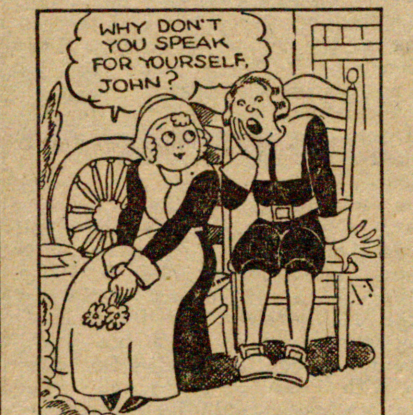

We never searched for trilliums, or found A violet near its enchanted ground. When winter came, we skated on a creek Far from its mystic surface, white and bleak.

Now that the trees are cut down like the years. Lost Lake a sunny shallow pool appears, Where water lilies grow and cowslips lift Their heads to heaven for the rain's cool gift.

How many of my childhood terrors lie Exposed in this same way beneath the sky Of wider vision! How the long years bring An end to senseless terror's whispering!

The chief value of Miles Standish is that it teaches people how to propose.

BONERS are actual humorous tid-bits found in examination papers, essays, etc., by teachers.

one-third of a cup of brown sugar, one-eighth teaspoon of nutmeg. Roll the bananas in this and lay close together in a buttered pan. Bake 20 minutes. Serve with whipped cream.

Maids of Honor.

Beat two eggs with one-half cup of sugar until light, then add two cups of cottage cheese, two tablespoons of cream, one-half cup of seedless raisins, one teaspoon of lemon peel, one tablespoon of lemon juice, two tablespoons of chopped almonds. Put a spoonful of the filling into individual tart pans lined with rich pastry and bake in a moderately hot oven.

History has it that these small pies were first made by a maid of honor to Katherine of Aragon.

Apple Fluff.

Peel, core and cut up three large apples, simmer with just enough water to cook without burning. Soften one and one-half tablespoons of gelatin in one cup of water, then heat until well dissolved. Add the grated rind and two tablespoons of juice of lemon, with one-third of a cup of maple syrup to the apples which have been previously put through a sieve. Cool, and when beginning to set, beat until light. Add the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs folded gently into the mixture. Turn into a mold which has been rinsed in cold water and chill. Serve with a custard made of the egg yolks, or cream may be used as a sauce.

Lesson for December 24

A VISION OF WORLD PEACE

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 11:1-9.
GOLDEN TEXT—They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountains: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. Isaiah 11:9.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Peace on Earth.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Prince of Peace.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Does Christmas Mean?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Christian Christmas.

Isaiah does not set forth merely an ideal for a world at strife. The fact is revealed that Jesus Christ shall come back to the earth and establish a kingdom, and remove from men's hearts the cause of strife. Instead of a vision of "World Peace" a better statement of the subject would be "The Universal Reign of Jesus Christ."

I. Who Is This King? (v. 1).

1. He is the Son of Man. "A child is born" (Isa. 9:6). The one who shall reign over all the world as king is a real human being. The eternal Son of God, incorporated with the human race in order to be its Saviour and Lord, shall come of David's line.

2. He is the Son of God. "A son is given" (Isa. 9:6). As the eternal Son of God he was not "born" but "given." This son "given" is the "Mighty God," the "Everlasting Father." Being such he will take the "government upon his shoulders," that is, he will assume all authority. He is "Wonderful." The world will marvel at him. He is the all-wise "Counselor." Therefore there will be no mistake made in his conduct of the affairs of the kingdom. He is the "Prince of Peace."

II. The King's Qualification (v. 2).

The king which the world needs and for which it longs must have superhuman wisdom and power. There shall rest upon him:

1. "The spirit of the Lord."
2. "The spirit of wisdom," giving insight into all things, human and divine.

3. "The spirit of understanding," giving him the ability to use that which is highest and best.

4. "The spirit of counsel," enabling him intelligently to plan and administer the affairs of the kingdom.

5. "The spirit of might"—ability to execute his plans.

6. "The spirit of knowledge," enabling him to perceive the will of God in all things.

7. "The fear of the Lord," causing him to be reverential and obedient.

III. The Character of the King's Reign (vv. 3-5).

1. "He shall not judge at the sight of his eyes." His knowledge is perfect. None can deceive him.

2. "Not reprove after the hearing of the ear." The word "reprove" means decide. His decisions, therefore will be on the basis of fact, not of hearsay.

3. "With righteousness shall he judge the poor." When Christ reigns as king the poor shall get justice.

4. "Shall smite the earth with the rod of his might." By the "earth" is meant the wicked inhabitants.

5. "He shall be girded with righteousness and faithfulness." He is absolutely righteous and will faithfully carry out all his words.

IV. The Issue of the King's Reign (vv. 6-10).

Here is a picture of the glorious golden age of which poets have sung and for which the great and wise men of all the ages have longed and looked. There will then be peace both between men and animals.

1. "The wolf shall dwell with the lamb" (v. 6). The word "dwell" suggests intimacy as if the lamb should receive the wolf into its home.

2. "The leopard shall lie down with the kid" (v. 6).

3. "The calf and the young lion and the fatling together" (v. 6). They are so gentle and kind that a little child shall lead them.

4. "The cow and the bear shall feed" (v. 7).

5. "The lion shall eat straw" (v. 7). The lion shall no longer prey upon other animals for food.

6. "The suckling child shall play on the hole of the asp" (v. 8).

7. "The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord" (v. 9). The issue of this glorious reign shall be the attraction of the Gentile nations (vv. 10-12). This is the real purpose of the coming kingdom.

Piety Comes First

No student can afford to say, as some unfortunately do, "I will secure my education first and my religion afterward." Religion is a value so important that it cannot safely be postponed or side-tracked in favor of any lesser concern.

How Sweet Is Rest!

Rest! How sweet the sound! It is melody to my ears! It lies as a reviving cordial at my heart, and from thence sends forth lively spirits which beat through all the pulses of my soul! —Baxter.

"As a Man Thinketh"

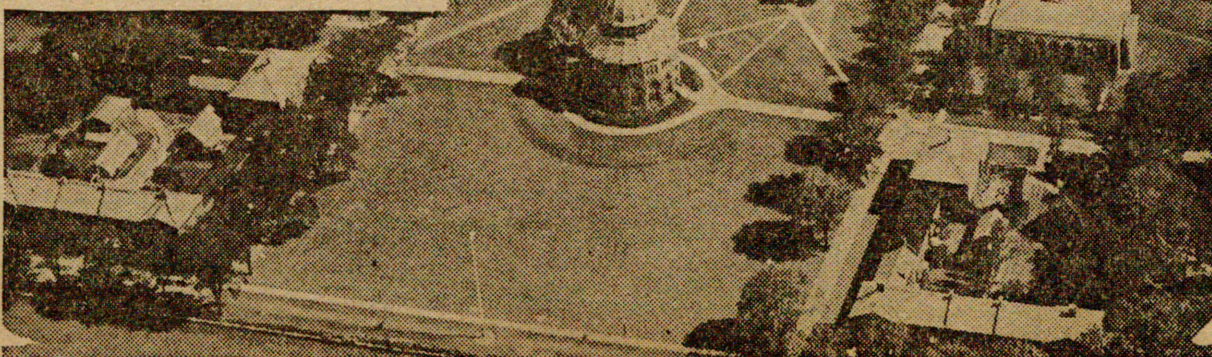

Out of the heart proceedeth every evil. The mind is the mill by which the grist of the soul is ground. Love thinketh no evil; righteousness does not meditate upon iniquity.

SYNOPSIS

Waiting in the minister's study while the wedding procession is being marshaled, Jim Franklin, about to be married to Doris Carmody, is stabbed to death. Callis Shipley, one of the bridesmaids, is obviously in a state of anxiety.

Without waiting to be informed, he knelt beside the bridegroom's body. Then, with a low "shh" of expelled breath, he turned a startled countenance to Peter again.

"Jim Franklin!" he ejaculated. "Look here, Doctor."

The medical examiner knelt beside him, and with swift fingers, laid back the vest and shirt that covered the wounds.

Franklin's death had been caused by two knife thrusts, one a long jagged tear across the groin, the second a smooth deep wound, between the ribs at or near the heart. This second wound was about three inches wide, and at either end a small blue bruise, half the size of a dime, stood out against the white skin.

Sergeant Kilday's glance darted about the room, questioning.

"The knife isn't here, Sergeant," Nick Royce informed him. "I've already looked."

"Who found him?" the officer asked tersely.

"I did. I was his best man, and was waiting out there in the sacristy, for the 'Wedding March' to begin," Royce volunteered. He repeated the story he had told the others of the discovery of the crime, not omitting the fact that his first action had been to telephone the story to his paper.

"You telephoned Topics before you notified us?" Kilday's tone was incredulous.

The newspaper man nodded.

"And you were his best man—pretty cold-blooded, wasn't it?" Kilday eyed the man narrowly.

"I don't look at it that way," Royce denied. "Jim was dead. I couldn't help him. And I couldn't keep a story like that out of the papers even if I wanted to." He pointed at his dead friend. "Jim Franklin has been murdered. Every one knows Jim Franklin. He'd have been the next governor of the state if he had lived. He was killed in the study of fashionable St. Matthew's church, while waiting for his own wedding march to begin. And," he glanced imperturbably at Ambrose Carmody, "he was marrying Doris Carmody. That's the most dramatic story since Lindbergh hit Paris."

"I'll sell three hundred thousand papers in the next two hours. If I didn't do it, somebody else would."

The medical examiner continued his examination, briefly. He shook his head when he finally arose. "Instantaneous," he said. "The murderer gave him the wound across the groin first, a glancing blow, painful, but not necessarily fatal. Evidently Franklin struggled." He indicated the torn collar. "His assailant grabbed him there, to prevent his calling for help. There are blue marks on his throat. As for these," he pointed out the small bruises at either end of the second wound, "I don't know where they came from, but the second wound did the business. I think it must have reached the heart, judging from the loss of blood."

Sergeant Kilday examined the blue bruises at either end of the wound intently. "What do you make of them, Peter?" he inquired presently.

The novelist shook his head. "I don't know," he said. "I've been trying to explain them, in my own mind, but I haven't had any luck, so far."

They were interrupted by a sharp rap on the door.

Kilday opened it.

A tall well-built man, whose intent gray eyes stared beyond the detective to the body on the floor, stood in the doorway.

"May I be of some assistance?" he inquired gravely. "I'm Milo Dunbar. Franklin and I are—or rather were—partners."

Kilday stepped aside to let him by. There was a suggestion of power in the reserved dignity of the man's smooth-shaven face. He stopped beside the body. Only for an instant did the firm lines of his mouth relax into an expression of pity. Then his reserve settled back on his face, like a mask.

"Have you any idea who did this thing?" he inquired of the detective.

"Not yet," replied Kilday. "But we will have, before long," he promised grimly.

Dunbar nodded. "Come to me for whatever help you need," he said.

Kilday grimaced ruefully. "You can rest assured we'll go after the man who did this. We've got to." He gave Nick Royce a wry smile. "If we don't, every paper in town will be after my scalp."

"And now the biggest help all of you can be is to clear out of this room until we finish with our investigation. I'll want to talk to all of you, later, but right now, I'd better have a look at this room, before anything is disturbed. You can wait in there." He motioned toward the sacristy.

Doctor Abernathy escaped from the room with evident relief, followed by Ambrose Carmody and Milo Dunbar. Cardigan hesitated, hoping for an invitation to remain, which was prompt in coming.

"I didn't mean you, Peter," the detective said. "I'm glad you're here. I'll need your help."

"How about me?" Nick Royce stopped in the door. "I'm representing Topics."

"Outside," growled Kilday. "We ain't let any of the other newspaper boys in yet, have we?"

"None of the other newspaper boys know as much about this as I do," retorted Royce confidently. "For instance, I could tell you that the murderer wiped his dagger on that curtain over there, before he ran out the back door."

Kilday examined the dark stain on the indicated curtain. "Stick around if you want to," he yielded grudgingly. "But I'd have found the mark on the curtain, anyway."

Under the sergeant's direction, the minute examination began. The detective with the camera began photographing each detail of the room. A second officer began the painstaking search for finger-prints.

Apparently, the room contained no secrets, aside from the body itself, the stained curtain, and numerous finger-prints which were photographed after careful preparation.

The sergeant had been bent over the table, carefully scrutinizing one of the finger-print specimens dusted for photographing by his subordinates. Now he straightened and faced Royce.

"Jim Franklin!"

"Who do you think killed Jim Franklin, Royce?" he demanded suddenly.

"A woman," replied the newspaper man calmly.

"Why?"

For the first time, Nick Royce answered reluctantly. "That was his weakness," he admitted grudgingly. "The fact is too well known to remain a secret long. There have been a great many women in Jim's life."

"Could a woman have held him by the throat to prevent an outcry, after the first thrust, until she had time for the second?" Cardigan inquired.

"Women can do lots of things we're reluctant to give them credit for," Royce retorted. "And at a time like that, people have more than their normal share of strength. Nervous excitement has something to do with it."

"Besides," he added as an afterthought, "how do we know which blow was struck first? Perhaps the deep thrust was the first one and the other came later, when Jim was weakened and dying. That would eliminate your theory that a woman couldn't have done it."

The novelist shook his head, slowly, his shaggy brows knit in a reflective scowl. "I don't think there was much struggle left in him after that blow," he said. "It must have come last."

"Let's begin at the beginning," Kilday suggested. "You say you were in the next room at the time this happened?"

The newspaper man nodded.

"Suppose you show me where you were standing," the sergeant invited, and Royce crossed to the door leading from the sacristy into the church.

"Doctor Abernathy had gone in," he said, "and I was watching for our cue to enter. The last I saw of Jim, before the crime, he was standing right where you are now. I turned my back to him and was watching the choir enter, waiting for the 'Wedding March' to begin. But when it did begin, Jim was dead."

"And you heard nothing at all in the room behind you?" Kilday's voice sounded slightly incredulous.

Royce shrugged his dapper shoulders. "I've said that I didn't. For one thing, they were singing, and the organ was playing. That would have drowned out any but a loud noise."

"Mr. Royce," Kilday's bland tone deceived no one, "you hadn't, by any chance, quarreled with Jim Franklin, had you?"

In spite of the smile of his thin lips, there was an unpleasant expression on the newspaper man's narrow face. "Sherlock," he said, with a mocking bow, "don't tell me you have guessed my secret. That's why I was the best man at his wedding."

"Just the same," Kilday retorted, "you weren't overcome by grief. You discover the man you say was your best friend, murdered, and the first thing you do is call up your newspaper."

He turned abruptly to Doctor Abernathy. "Where were you?"

"In the church. I was standing at the choir steps, waiting for the bridal party."

"Could you see this man, standing here in the door, from your position in there?"

The rector hesitated. "I could have," he agreed. "But you see, I wasn't facing in this direction."

"You didn't look over this way, when it was time for the bridegroom to show up, and he didn't?" The sergeant had not missed that instant's hesitation.

"Why, yes, I glanced over this way several times. I didn't understand what was wrong."

"Well, when you glanced over here, did you see Royce? That's what I'm asking you, Doctor Abernathy."

"No, I didn't see him," the rector admitted.

"I wasn't standing where I could be seen from the church," Nick Royce interrupted. "The door was only open a crack, and I was standing well back."

"You didn't say that, at first," Kilday challenged.

"I took your intelligence too much for granted, I'm afraid." If the officer heard, he gave no sign.

"We're taking one of the curtains out of your study," he informed the rector. "The slayer wiped the knife there."

"Did you find the weapon?" It was Milo Dunbar who asked.

"Not yet. Probably the murderer took it with him."

"And so that convicts me," Nick Royce interrupted ironically. "Of course I've had time to run home and hide the knife."

"You ran outside to get in the back door of the study, didn't you?" Kilday demanded. Then, turning to one of his assistants, "Take a look outside there, Pat. Maybe the knife was dropped around there."

"You can't fool old Sherlock," Royce ironically remarked, and walking to the window, he watched the detective as he searched the shrubbery outside for some trace of the weapon.

Peter studied the newspaper man's back with puzzled blue eyes. What was wrong with Royce? Did he really have something to conceal? The thought seemed preposterous. As he had so pointedly made clear, Jim Franklin would scarcely have asked any but his most trusted friend to be his best man. Where could you make a motive for murder out of that?

And then, too, where was the knife? If Royce had committed the crime, how had he been able to dispose of the knife? No, that didn't fit, unless (and Peter entertained slight hope of this) it were found outside by the man Kilday had sent to conduct the search.

Peter stepped outside. This was the path Royce had taken, to get from the sacristy to the back door of the study. Except for a few shrubs, he noticed, there was no place the knife might have been concealed on this side of the church.

It was different at the back. Standing beneath the stone arches of the cloister which connected the study with the rectory, the novelist surveyed the garden. There was ample opportunity to hide a dozen daggers here, given the time.

And Royce had had plenty of that. Between the time the rector had left the two men in the sacristy, and the arrival of the usher sent by Ambrose Carmody to discover what was wrong, considerable time had elapsed. And what if Nick had not telephoned his newspaper, after all? What if that were just a subterfuge, by which he hoped to explain his failure to notify anyone of what had happened?

In that event, Peter reasoned, the dagger would be found here.

Then he turned into the rear door of the study, and hesitated in the doorway, his restless eyes exploring every detail of the room. The police search had been thorough. Small chance that any detail had been missed. Yet, in his experience he had occasionally found an apparently trivial, overlooked detail, that had become the vital clue in the solution of a crime.

Suddenly his eyes stopped on the wall, opposite, near the door leading to the sacristy. Had he found such a clue here?

There was an eager light dancing behind the bright blue of his eyes. Hanging in a scabbard, not three feet from the door, was a short dagger of Oriental design with an elaborately carved handle.

Hanging on the wall in a scabbard! Was that how they had missed it? What would Nick Royce have to say now?

The Christmas Fire by HELEN GAISFORD

RALPH McQUISTION sat sniffing the warm air of the kitchen, where his mother was basting a turkey and a plum pudding steamed. He was very proud of his new post as a captain in the volunteer fire department; it smelled like a wonderful Christmas dinner; all in all it was a perfect world, except for just one thing:

The one thing was Georgia, who hadn't spoken to him since their quarrel two months ago. It had been lonely enough before, but it seemed worse now not to have a sweetheart at Christmas time.

"Better get ready for church, son."

"I don't think I'll go."

"Not go! Why, it will be a beautiful service. Everyone will be there and Georgia is going to sing some songs."

"Yes," he answered slowly. "I know."

"If you can't forget her, son, you had better make it up. You can't keep on like this."

"There's nothing I can do," he replied. "She is too proud. If only something would happen."

The church bells rang out. "Only fifteen minutes," said his mother. "You had better come along."

The little church was crowded. Evergreens decorated the aisles, and over the altar there hung a star. The old, old story was told again, of an angel chorus, and shepherds, and the wise men.

Ralph, looking at Georgia, thought she had never seemed so beautiful. And when she sang, the sweet poignancy was almost more than he could bear.

After the service he went up to her. "May I say Merry Christmas, too, Georgia?" he asked. "Your song this morning was wonderful."

"It is kind of you to say so," she answered a little stiffly. There were others waiting to shake hands and exchange greetings, and she had to run away, but Ralph thought he had detected a faint blush.

"Let It Go," She Called. "You Might Be Hurt."

"Come along, Mother," he said at last. "Let's get on home to that turkey."

But at that moment, the alarm clanged, and all the men rushed down the street and around the corner to the fire station. Ralph's post was with the chemical engine, and in a few seconds it was out and he and his crew were on their way.

Almost the entire town followed not far behind. A dense pillar of smoke told where to turn, and Ralph was dismayed to find that it was Georgia's house that was in flames.

He worked as he had never worked before. He was in and out of the burning building a dozen times, dragging out furniture, urging his men on, pointing out the best spots to concentrate their efforts.

Georgia stood with the others looking on. "Don't, Ralph!" she pleaded one time when he came out. "Please don't take such risks!"

"Just to have you care is worth more than whatever I can do," he answered. "If there is anything you value especially, I wish you would tell me. I will get it for you if I possibly can."

"No, you mustn't take any more chances."

"Nonsense! Tell me what to get." "The only picture of my mother is on the dresser. I do wish that could be saved." But when he dashed away she called after him to stop. "Let it go," she called. "You might be hurt." But he was inside the house.

Georgia stood tense, scarcely daring to breathe. "Look out," someone called. "The roof is falling!" There was a shower of sparks and a crash.

But through the door emerged Ralph, with the picture in his hand. "Oh," she said, and suddenly was limp in his arms. "You shouldn't have risked it."

"Georgia," he whispered, as he held her close, "I would risk anything for you. I wanted so to give you a Christmas present, but I didn't dare fear you would refuse it. But now I can give you this picture, and I know you won't refuse."

"I haven't any gift for you in return," she answered, "but if I say that I am sorry, and—and that I love you, would that do?"

"Would it!" he answered. "What a Christmas!"

THE GOOD STAR

By Hubert Kelley in Kansas City Star

WISE and Strong, how strange you are,
Who weigh the wind and plumb the star,
To sheathe your minds and make a king

Of such a small and helpless thing.
And you, whose soaring steel has won
The favor of the flaming sun,
Who, to the icy moon, have thrown
Your perilous pinnacles of stone,
How strange you do not look aloof
Upon a wretched stable roof!

O Proud Possessors, you who spend
That you may have the more to lend,
Whom life has taught to understand
The wisdom of the grasping hand,
How strange that you should find it sweet
To set your silver at his feet.
By what strange urging, what strange art
Do you abjure the hardened heart?
O World of Men, how wise you are
To count that one uncounted star!

Holly Faces Extermination

The holly tree, the shining green leaves and bright red berries of which have been such an attractive feature of Christmas decorations, is almost world-wide in its distributions. The red-berried type is the one most sought after for the Yuletide, but because of the careless and indiscriminate gathering of the branches faces extermination. Among the 175 varieties of the holly there are types which bear yellow and black berries, which, like the red berries, last over until the following spring. The flex opaca, or American holly, often attains a height of 50 feet, while the flex aquifolium, popular in England, is a small shrub seldom attaining more than a few feet in height.

ELECTRICITY IS THRIFTY ITEM

As you cast up your accounts for 1933, with an eye on holiday shopping and with some regard for the budget for the New Year, you probably are reminded that living costs are again rising.

But the cost of electricity, so important to your household, is unchanged.

In good times or bad, over a score of years, the trend of electric rates has been downward. But living costs have rocketed upward, slid down, and are now rising again. So that now your general cost of living is 28% higher than pre-war level, while your electricity costs you 47.33% LESS than it did in 1911.

With living costs still mounting, the price of electricity remains at the same old level, still the most reasonable item in your household budget.

Announcing

NEW FORD V-8 for 1934

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

The New Ford V-8 for 1934 is now on display at the showrooms of Ford dealers. Surpassing even the great Ford of 1933 in economy, beauty and comfort, it is truly the car of this modern age—the culmination of thirty years Ford progress. It combines the proved performance of the V-8 cylinder engine with two important new features—Dual Carburetion and perfected Clear-vision Ventilation. See this car today and drive it at the first opportunity.

OUTSTANDING IMPROVEMENTS IN THE NEW FORD V-8

BETTER PERFORMANCE. Greater power, new speed, quicker acceleration, smoother performance, more miles per gallon especially at higher speeds, and quicker starting in cold weather—all these result from the new dual carburetor and dual intake manifold. New water-line thermostats enable the engine to warm up more quickly and to maintain an efficient operating temperature. Added engine refinements reduce oil consumption, further improve operating economy and reduce maintenance costs.

NEW VENTILATION SYSTEM permits clear vision, prevents drafts and provides desired amount of fresh air in any weather. Individual control for front and rear side windows. When ventilation is desired the window glass is raised to the top. Then the handle is given an additional half-turn. This slides the glass back horizontally to form a narrow slot. Through this slot air is drawn out by the forward motion of the car. This simple ventilation system maintains draft-free circulation, insures passenger comfort, prevents fogging windshield in cold or stormy weather. Both windshield and cowl ventilator can be opened to supply additional air needed for comfortable warm-weather driving.

DISTINCTIVE NEW APPEARANCE enhanced by the newly designed chromium-plated radiator shell and grille, new hood louvers, new hub caps. Interiors are attractive, with new tufted upholstery, new mouldings, new cove-type headlining, new instrument panel, new arm rests, new hardware. Swivel-type sun visors in De Luxe bodies prevent glare from front or side.

FENDERS IN COLOR. On De Luxe cars fenders are in color to harmonize with body colors—wheel colors optional. New enamel finish on all bodies and fenders has greater wearing quality and more enduring luster.

GREATER RIDING COMFORT results from increased spring flexibility. The spring leaves are newly designed for quieter and easier action. Shock absorbers are improved. Seat cushions are deeper, with new, softer springs. New type, individual bucket seats provide increased comfort for front-seat passengers in the Tudor Sedan. Adding to comfort is the new driving ease of the 15-to-1 steering gear ratio.

PRICES REMAIN LOW—Tudor Sedan, $535. Coupe, $515. Fordor Sedan, $585. De Luxe Tudor, $575. De Luxe Fordor, $625. De Luxe Coupe (5 windows), $555. De Luxe Coupe (3 windows), $555. De Luxe Roadster, $525. De Luxe Phaeton, $550. Cabriolet, $590. Victoria, $610. (All prices f. o. b. Detroit.)

MOKENA

While Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hentsch were attending a party at the home of the latter's sister, Mrs. Willis Hall in Chicago Saturday night, their car, a Buick coach, which had been parked in front of the apartment was stolen early Sunday morning. The theft was reported to the police, but no trace of the stolen car has been found.

The little son of Mrs. Rogers has been seriously ill in the hospital in Joliet with pneumonia the past week.

Mrs. James Eggerton was a Chicago visitor Wednesday. Clifford Mahoney who has been ill is able to be up again.

A carload of cinders has been received here the past week to be used in filling in a piece of low land on the Rock Island property northwest of the depot. The cinders were sent on the petition of the Mokena Garden Club.

The Western Union Telegraph line men have about finished their repair work on the telegraph lines thru here.

The A. E. Wachter family are going to spend Christmas in Joliet with their daughter, Mrs. Robert Welsh and family.

SCHOOL NEWS

The Christmas program of the Mokena Public School was given on Thursday night, December 21st at 7:30 o'clock. Miss Vail and Miss Doig were the directors.

Miss Doig's room added a miniature Santa Claus with his sleigh and reindeer.

Friday afternoon Miss Doig's room and Mrs. Ferguson's room will join for an hour of Christmas entertainment. Songs, recitations and Christmas records will be enjoyed.

The children of Mrs. Ferguson's room are all busy making Christmas gifts this week.

All the grade rooms have lighted Christmas trees.

Mokena played three games of basketball last Thursday evening, December 14, at Manhattan. The High School first team played the Manhattan first team and won 31-13. The stars for Mokena were Yunker, with thirteen points and Miskie and Rinke, each with eight points. Manhattan's leading man in the scoring field was Engle, with eight points. The High School second team battled with results of 25-7 in favor of Mokena. Mayfield with three points and Gabel with eight led the field for the respective teams. The Mokena and Manhattan Grade school team furnished entertainment for the third game of the evening. Mokena was victorious by a score of 19-8. B. Steba, starred for Manhattan with six points and Jungles stepped out in front of Mokena with a total of 8 points.

The next basketball game will be played December 22nd at Beecher. There will be two games.

Miss Maxine Vail, High School teacher, will visit her home in Benton, Wisconsin, for the Christmas season. Miss Elizabeth Krusemark will visit her home in Truman, Minnesota.

The last day of school is December 22nd, 1933. Vacation ends January 2, 1934.

ORLAND PARK

The Orland Park Laurel Camp of the Royal Neighbors have elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

Oracle, Loretta Ludwig
Vice Oracle, Hilda Cox
Past Oracle, Olive Loebe
Recorder, Mollie Reisch
Receiver, Maria Smith
Marshall, Edith Doctor
Assistant Marshall, Marie Heiting
Chaplain, Nellie Wheeler
Inner Sentinel, Emma Burkhardt
Outer Sentinel, Christina Rust
Flag Bearer, Hazel Moore
Musician, Lillian Knox
Manager for 3 year term, Minnie Davidson.

The installation of these officers will be held in January.

The Royal Neighbors of Laurel Camp No. 1796 met in the Legion Hall Monday night for an adjourned meeting and Christmas party. The evening was spent playing games and exchanging gifts after which the ladies were seated at a long table laden with sweets for the sweet. Twenty-two guests were present. Games were played and prizes were given. The Christmas party committee consisted of Mrs. Taylor, Clista Margolis and Christina Rust.

The Royal Neighbor Juveniles held their Christmas party in the Legion Hall Wednesday night.

Orland P. T. A.

The Orland Park Parent-Teachers Association sponsored a very successful Christmas party for the pupils Thursday, Dec. 14. The meeting was called to order by President Arnold. The usual business routine followed after which a very fine program was given by the pupils.

Owing to the weather and icy pavements, Miss Masters and Miss Van Camp who are members of the program committee were unable to come. And at a few moments notice Miss Schmaedeke and Miss Kettering took charge and preceded as tho they were the acting committee. The program was rendered so well that the PTA says many thanks to these capable teachers for their co-operation.

After the program each pupil was presented with a Christmas surprise package which consisted of candy, apple and orange. They were then served cookies and cocoa.

The parents were also given a treat of cake and coffee. In all there were ninety-five packages given out. The Christmas party committee acting were: Mrs. Reisch, Mrs. Mullin, Mrs. Knox, Miss Van Camp and Mrs. Rust.

The pupils of the high school were given two dollars to buy a book as their Christmas gift.

This organization needs your worthy support though you may not have children in school. You are more than welcome to become a member as the P. T. A. needs every one to help as a great many benefits have been derived from this small organization and in four years over eleven hundred dollars have been raised and spent in this community and for the school by the P. T. A. Those acting presidents were: H. Adele Cooper and Hilda Cox. Mrs. L. Arnold is now serving her last year as president and will have several hundred dollars to add to the above mentioned fund.

We ask you will you please give us your support.

The Clinic was held Wednesday morning from 10 o'clock to 12. There were several new babies added to chairman Margolis's list of which we are very glad. Please do not forget the Clinic is always the first Wednesday of every month unless otherwise notified.

Floyd Cooper, who suffered a broken ankle sometime ago, was able to be out for the first time the past week.

Postmaster A. J. Toelle reports a very heavy Christmas mail the past week and this week.

Phillip Steffen, Sr., has been given the job of painting the village hall and has the work well under way.

ORLAND PARK SCHOOL NOTES

On Friday afternoon at 1:30 the pupils of the grammar grades presented a Christmas program. Santa Claus called and all had a most delightful time. A Christmas tree with electric colored lights was in the primary all of this week.

Miss McMahon and Mr. Simpson, the latter the State School Inspector, visited our school Tuesday.

After a week's vacation, school will open again on January second.

The Orland Park High School basketball team played the Beecher High at Beecher Friday night. Orland emerged victorious by the score of 24 to 15. Capt. Frank Steinmetz was outstanding for Orland, making 7 full goals and 1 free throw. White was high score for Beecher. The score was as follows:

AN OPEN LETTER TO ALL EX-SERVICE MEN ELIGIBLE TO MEMBERSHIP IN THE V. F. W.

Dear Comrades:
Nearly every World-War Veteran today finds himself in the position where he would greatly appreciate receiving immediate cash payment of his adjusted compensation certificate—that twenty year endowment policy that was granted by the government back in 1924.

As an organization of America's overseas ex-service men, dedicated to the welfare of the man who served, the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S., believes that this "graveyard bonus" should be paid to the veteran in cash today while his need is acute. This so-called bonus is a just debt, acknowledged by Congress and approved by the public, and we believe it should be duly paid to the veteran in the same manner that the government has always discharged its other obligations.

More than three years ago the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S., took the lead in the nationwide movement to secure immediate cash payment on these certificates. Public sentiment in this behalf is increasing daily, stimulated by a business depression that would be greatly benefited thru the distribution of these funds.

With the assistance of yourself and other Comrades eligible to membership, the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S., is assured of victory in the attainment of this objective. The small fee that you will be required to pay for initiation and dues is an insignificant investment for the returns involved. Give us your support by calling or writing to the undersigned for an application blank for membership in Wm. Martin Post No. 725, Frankfort, Ill., and thus the V. F. W., will be strengthened in its appeal to Congress and the country at large for payment of this debt to the veteran that is long past due.

Yours in Comradeship,
ARTHUR C. SCHILLER,
Publicity Chairman.

My Work As A

Local 4H Club Leader

By Mrs. Emil Kampe
Frankfort, Illinois

My leadership began on a small scale in the year 1930 when I helped my own two boys in club work. This year I organized my first year sewing club with seven members. As a local leader I soon learned that the girls were interested in different lines of things that they were interested in public welfare.

I caught the spirit and obtained the idea of presenting the play entitled "Happy Valley" which we put on in Tinley Park and later in Mokena.

I have endeavored to do more than ever and it has been something which has given me the greatest satisfaction of anything I have done in club work. I have enjoyed this leadership work very much and I hope that I have helped the girls and boys to have a happy and worth while summer of work and play.

I believe that I could have done more in my club work if I had not always had my every day home work to do at the same time. But I did spend part of my time doing club work. I have tried to be of service to my community.

I attended meetings called at homes. I wrote dozens of letters and had many telephone calls concerning club work.

My club girls attended county 4H Club meetings and had many exhibits and won many prizes. We can not all be prize winners and one of the things to be stressed in 4H club work is good sportsmanship whether we win or not.

I have had excellent assistance from fine girls and boys of our community. I have had the kindly co-operation of many and I have come to realize that kindness is more than all the rest there is in the world. I am looking forward to next year's club work. We are just about ready to step from the old year into the New Year, so let me join in wishing my club girls and boys and my many friends a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Beware the Cough or Cold that Hangs On Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, and attacks the seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Your own druggist is authorized to refund your money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Creomulsion. (adv.)

BEAUTY TALKS

By
MARJORIE DUNCAN

BEAUTIFYING THE LIPS

MAKE-UP is a subtle art—and only the accomplished artist turns a truly enhanced face to the world. If rouge must be blended carefully, if powder must be patted gently, then even greater care must be employed in the heightening of the beauty of the lips and eyes via make-up. For lip rouge or lip rouge can help to bring out the color of the lips, can make the mouth look more expressive, smaller or larger (as you would wish it to be.) All that—you can do—you yourself can be the magician—if you choose the right shade of lip paste or lip stick and apply properly—artfully.

Your lip rouge should harmonize perfectly with your cheek rouge and with your own color.

In rouging the lips, begin at the center and work out to the corners. If the mouth is very small, rouge to the very corners, otherwise allow the color to fade away toward the corners. Part the lips somewhat and carry the blending process to the inside of the lip too. This will avoid the sharply defined line where lips meet. You see that so often, if it is necessary for you to use an indelible lip-stick or paste, there are perfectly harmless ones on the market. The color will last until washed or creamed off. And any drying effect may be offset by the nightly use of your skin-food.

Many young girls make the mistake of using too much lipstick. This gives the mouth and the face a very hard expression. In the theater, or ladies' rest rooms of colleges I have seen them—they grease their entire lip line, piling lipstick on top of lipstick. And then they wonder why the lipstick separates and comes off. Grease cannot stay on top of grease. Here again the old beauty maxim of a little is enough applies. Just a little and remember one stroke on the upper lip from the center toward one corner, and one stroke to the other corner. Then a steady stroke on the lower lip. Then subtle blending with the finger tips, until the grease disappears. And—you have a lasting make-up, I assure you.

There are several little make-up tricks every woman should know—and knowing them you can make your mouth look smaller and fuller. Give your lips color and character.

HIGHLIGHT THE EYES

EYE make-up is gaining more and more favor.

There are eye-shadows in cream and compact form, cream eyelash growers, mascaras in cake and liquid form—in a word, the beauty world is full of a number of things you can use to highlight your eyes.

The most popular of all of these seem to be the eye-shadow and the mascara. In spite of the fact that more and more women are learning to use the eye-shadow, the number is still very small. Many of the people who do use eye-shadow, use it to excess. And those around them, seeing the effect, blame it on the eye-shadow and therefore avoid it. As a matter of fact, eye-shadow can make the eyes look larger, brighter and more beautiful.

To apply eye-shadow successfully, take just a dab of it on your index or middle finger and apply on the upper lid, near the lash line, beginning at the inner corner, near the bridge of the nose and working out so that most of the color appears near the center of the lids, over the pupils of the eyes, and practically no shadow is left at the outer corner.

Very lightly and carefully used, eye-shadow not only creates those fascinating shadows that make the eyes look deeper and more mysterious, but it also gives the lids a dewy, youthful look. It comes in various shades—brown for dark eyes, blue for blue or gray eyes, green for greenish blue or hazel eyes—especially fascinating for Auburn-haired people.

Mascara comes in various shades too, but light and dark brown is becoming to most types—particularly to fair people. Use the black only if you are very dark—a real brunette. Moist-en your eyebrow brush, rub over the mascara compact cake and brush the upper lashes upward and under—brush every little lash, clear out to the last one at the outer corner. Allow the mascara to dry. Then using a dry brush go over the lashes lightly once more. Use the mascara most sparingly on the lower lashes, brushing downward and under.

Now the brows. Brush them the wrong way first to stimulate the circulation and give them a silky quality. Then brush every little hair in place. Use a pencil or the mascara to darken them. And pluck any stray hairs—just the wild ones.

How many women, I wonder, are as intent on keeping their eyes as young as their chin line. Do you, when your eyes feel strained or tired, call it a day and stop reading or sewing—or whatever it is you are doing? If you are doing close work in an office or home do you raise your eyes every once in a while and stare way into the distance for a few minutes? That is an excellent way to rest the eyes, you know.

Fruit Cake of High Quality

Many Ways of Making It, but All Have One Common Foundation—Liberality in Fruit for the Mixture Is Indispensable.

The other day, says a writer on home economics, some one asked me to define different types of fruit cakes according to their native origin. I quite blithely answered, "Why, certainly! English fruit cake is usually dark and southern fruit cake is usually light!" Then, upon looking up recipes in numerous books in my collection, I discovered that I had been too quick in my response. I was answering out of my experience in English and southern homes. I find that the cook books do not agree with my own experiences and so I think I shall have to designate my fruit cake recipes in some other way, perhaps by their color.

While fruit cake recipes vary, they are all alike in one respect—they must contain plenty of fruit. The mixture which holds them together may be flavored in a variety of ways, and these flavorings are not only responsible for the variation in taste but also for the variation in color. The fruit content varies from the simplest type, which contains only raisins, to the most elaborate, which may have citron, apricots, pineapple, figs, currants, dates, or cherries, candied fruit peels, and almonds or pecans in addition. Old fruit cake recipes call for brandy or sherry to furnish the liquid. In the absence of these you will find fruit juices, cider, jelly, and coffee useful.

No matter what type of cake you decide to make, you must give it a long baking or combined steaming and baking. Some people find that the easiest way to bake a fruit cake is to steam it first! It will take about two and a half to three hours steaming and then it may be finished by taking an hour longer in a slow oven, to dry it out. A reader asks me to mention the type of utensils used when cakes and puddings are steamed. A regular "steamer" is, of course, easiest. Anything put in this type of steamer must be tightly covered with tin or oiled or parchment paper, or cellophane, held tightly in place by a rubber band or a string. If you haven't a steamer, you can easily manufacture one by using a large kettle and placing your puddings or cakes on a trivet or rack. You will have to renew the water more often in this makeshift arrangement, but it will be perfectly satisfactory.

Naturally the length of time for baking depends upon the size of the cake. Very small cakes will bake in an hour and a quarter, while the large cakes take as much as three hours. To prevent its browning too quickly, it is sometimes covered with paper, or if you are using a glass baking dish you may use the cover which comes with it. After the mixture is in the pans you may decorate the top with candied cherries and almonds in artistic arrangement.

I wonder if you have seen the ready-to-mix and bake fruit cake mixtures which have come on the market? Fruits and nuts of excellent quality cut in large pieces, as they should be for good and true fruit cakes, are combined with the dry ingredients ready for you to add the liquid. One of these products comes in a pan which is lined with paper into which the cake mixture may be put back and baked. This pan may also be used with its cover for storing the cake. You will also find excellent ready baked fruit cakes in fancy boxes suitable for Christmas gifts.

One of my friends, an expert, who is the owner and manager of a well-known restaurant, told me a very interesting thing about keeping fruit cakes. After the cakes are baked and put away for storage she covers them with a layer of brown sugar, which keeps them moist and develops the flavors. I am passing this very valuable hint on to you. And don't forget that the sooner you make your cakes the better they will be at Christmas time!

Dark Fruit Cake
1 pound citron.
1 pound candied apricots.
1 pound candied pineapple.
1 pound candied cherries.
3 pounds seeded raisins.
1 pound currants.
½ pound raw almonds.
½ pound flour.
1 teaspoon baking powder.
1 teaspoon cinnamon.
1 teaspoon nutmeg.
½ pound butter.
½ pound brown sugar.
6 eggs.
1½ cups cider.
1 glass jelly.
Yield—10 pounds.

Cut into thin slices the citron, pineapple and apricots. Cut the cherries. Wash the raisins and currants and dry them. Blanch and chop the almonds. Mix these ingredients together. Sift flour with baking powder and spices. Combine fruit and flour mixtures thoroughly. Cream the butter and sugar. Add the egg yolks and then the cider and jelly alternately with the fruit mixture. Beat the egg whites until stiff and fold them into the fruit mixture. Grease the bottoms and sides of glass baking dishes and fill about three-fourths full. Decorate tops of cake with candied cherries and almonds. Cover and bake in a slow oven, 275 degrees Fahrenheit, 1½ to 3 hours. The length of baking time will depend on the size of the baking dishes.

White Fruit Cake
1 cup seeded white raisins.
½ cup sliced orange peel.
½ cup sliced lemon peel.
½ cup sliced citron.
1 package shredded coconut.
1 cup blanched almonds.
2½ cups flour.
1 teaspoon baking powder.
¼ teaspoon salt.
¼ cup shortening.
1 cup sugar.
3 eggs.
½ cup sherry flavoring.
½ cup orange juice.

Wash raisins and drain well. Place raisins, fruit peels, coconut and coarsely chopped nut meats in bowl. Sift flour, baking powder and salt over fruit; mix fruit through the flour with fingers. Cream shortening, add sugar gradually, then beaten eggs. Add flavoring. Stir in fruits and flour mixture alternately with orange juice. Pour mixture into one large or several small greased tins. Bake in a slow oven, 300 degrees Fahrenheit. Makes three pounds.

Honey Fruit Cake
2 pounds raisins.
1 pound currants.
½ pound citron.
½ pound candied orange peel.
½ pound candied cherries.
½ pound dates.
½ pound figs.
½ pound blanched almonds.
½ pound flour.
½ pound shortening.
½ pound sugar.
6 eggs (well beaten).
1 cup sour milk.
1 cup honey.
½ cup currant jelly.
1½ teaspoons salt.
2 teaspoons nutmeg.
2 teaspoons cinnamon.
¼ pound cloves.
1 teaspoon allspice.
¼ teaspoon soda.
1 teaspoon baking powder.

Chop fruit and nuts and dredge with one-half cup flour. Cream shortening and sugar until light and add the eggs, sour milk, honey, jelly. Mix thoroughly. Sift the remainder of the flour with the salt, spices, soda and baking powder and sift into the egg mixture. Beat until smooth and stir in the dredged fruit and nuts. Pour into well-greased baking dishes. Bake at 275 degrees Fahrenheit for 2½ hours. One-half hour before the cakes are done remove from the oven, brush over with honey and decorate as desired. Return to the oven to finish baking. Cool and then place covers on baking dishes, and if allowed to ripen three weeks or longer the cakes will be better. Makes nine pounds.

Young Hitlerites Told How to Choose Wives

What kind of a girl should a true-blue German Aryan marry? As first aid to ardent young Hitlerites about to venture into matrimony, the Berlin Das Wissen der Nation (Nation's Wisdom) publishes a series of recommendations designed to ensure the purity of the German race.

This weekly recommends only blonds with blue eyes, an oval face and white skin. The Nazis are warned against brunettes of obviously Mediterranean origin, with long torso and short legs, black hair and thick, sensuous lips.

But the recommendations of Das Wissen der Nation are even more drastic. Suspect also are sophisticated society girls, actresses, breakers of sports records and even young women who earn their living in the liberal professions.

The heroic Aryan is urged to choose a good, industrious and pure girl, who is known to be an adept housekeeper, with an affection for children—"even though she may be stupid."—Literary Digest.

TREAT FOR THE WIFE

The hour of midnight was just striking as the householder crept silently down the stairs. With a quick movement he snapped on the electric light and gasped as his eyes fell on a burglar tampering with his safe.

"Love, a real burglar!" he smiled.

"Wait a minute, will you?"

The burglar prepared to make his escape.

"While you call a copper, eh?" he said. "Not me!"

"No," said the householder. "Only wait while I call my wife. She's heard you every night for 15 years, and it'll be a real pleasure to her to see you at last."

Unfamiliar

A comedian touring in Australia sprung a lot of new jokes on his audience, but didn't get a laugh. Coming off the stage he said to the manager: "What's the matter? Aren't my gags all right?"

"Aye, the gags are a bit of all-right," soothed the manager, "but, ye see, we've never heard 'em before."—Boston Transcript.

Proof

"My last boarder was a wonderful artist," sighed the landlady, as she hacked at the pie-crust. "He always said he found inspiration in my cooking."

"Ah, a sculptor, I presume," said the new boarder, surveying his bent fork.—Pearson's Magazine.

Johnny—Mom, won't you gimme that candy now?

Mom—Didn't I tell you I wouldn't give you any unless you kept still?

Johnny—Yes, but—

Mom—Well, the longer you keep still the sooner you'll get it.

NOTHING DOING

"Keep your wife supplied with a box of candy and perhaps she won't nag you."

"Candy wouldn't stop her. That woman can keep on talking with a mouth full of hairpins."

Mollified Censure

"I do not like sarcasm," said the gentle friend.

"And yet," said Miss Cayenne, "it may have its good qualities. Sarcasm is what we resort to when we feel too generous to be brutally frank."

Social Barter

"Why do you women always give away secrets?"

"We don't; we merely exchange them."—Boston Transcript.

Story Is Ended

"How are you, Mrs. Browne?"

"Oh, I've nothing to grumble at."

"Mr. Browne away then?"

Cat Out o' the Bag

"Here, what do you mean by telling Jones that I was a blockhead?"

"Why, it isn't a secret, is it?"

CAMOUFLAGE

Biggs, the manager of the restaurant, was talking in undertones to his head chef.

Afterwards he called all his waitresses into his private office.

"Girls," he said, "I want you all to look your very best today. Add an extra dab of powder to your cheeks and take a little more care with your hair."

"Why, what's the matter?" asked the head waitress. "Butter bad again?"

"No," said the manager; "the beef's tough."—London Tit-Bits.

BROKE THE MONOTONY

"So you spent your entire vacation on the beach?"

"No, I went in the water once."

Playing Safe

"I have known you so long, doctor," said the patient at the end of a visit, "that I do not intend to insult you by paying your bill. But I have arranged a handsome legacy for you in my will."

"That's very kind of you," the doctor replied. "Allow me to look at the prescription again. There is a slight alteration which I would like to make in it."—Pearson's Weekly.

Sunday School Teacher—And now, children, can you tell me when Baalam and his ass conversed, what language they spoke in?

Bobby—Please, teacher, Assyrian.—Boston Transcript.

Give Her Some Catnip

Mrs. Gabb—So your husband objects to cats.

Mrs. Stabb—Yes, indeed. He says that I feed all the cats in the neighborhood. Won't you stay and have tea?—Boston Transcript.

No Wonder

Father—Alicia, what was it kept that young Neckmore so late last night, when we all wanted to sleep?

Alicia—He was trying to explain inflation to me.

Mentioned

Little sister, meeting her uncle, who asked how big sister had fared in a music examination: "Oh, she missed getting a medal, but she was horribly mentioned."—Montreal Star.

Hope

"I tell ye, Pat, hope is a great blessing."

"Well, I dunno. If it wasn't for hope, none of us would ever be disappointed."—Vancouver Province.

Master (going over estate)—What does this label "Wait and see" mean?

Gardener—Well, I forgot just what I planted there, sir.

Crop Failure

Mother—After all, he's only a boy, and boys will sow their wild oats.

Father—I wouldn't mind it if he didn't mix it so much.

FIND THE TREND AND FOUNDATION OF CHILD FEARS

Despite the definite trend toward realism in modern life, children still are afraid of such supernatural manifestations as giants, witches, monsters, ghosts and devils. Mystery and gorilla movies, spooky stories, radio crime programs, and even lurid pictures in newspapers produce distinct fears, while kidnapping retains—even before the sensational kidnapping wave of the past two years—a large element of dread fear for many children.

These findings are among the many derived from an exhaustive study of children's fears, desires and fancies just completed by Dr. Arthur T. Jersild, assistant professor of education and research of the Child Labor Development Institute, Teachers' college, Columbia university. Doctor Jersild studied 400 children, ages five to twelve, in public and private schools of New York. He delved into their dreams, asked them what they would do if they had a million dollars, and whether they preferred to be boys or girls.

One of the most surprising findings was the fears of the occult, the supernatural, of mystery, skeletons, corpses and deaths. Twenty-one per cent of the children classed these as their "worst fears." The younger children expressed fear of animals, while seven per cent were primarily afraid of robbers, kidnapers and others of the criminal class. Doctor Jersild said the fear of kidnapping had been engendered by conversation and stories, often by parents, for all but twelve of the 400 children had been interviewed before the kidnapping of the Lindbergh baby, early in 1932.—Literary Digest.

Those "Good Old Days"

As a sanitary measure Anazarchus, a picayunish gourmet in the suite of Alexander on his Asiatic expedition, made his slaves wear gloves to knead the dough for his bread, and furthermore, the Greeks and Romans, who dipped down in the dishes and ate with their fingers, wore gloves at the table, not only to keep their hands clean, but also to keep from drawing back a blistered nub—food was served hot in those days.

Priests wore gloves at mass in order that they might offer the holy sacrifice with clean and pure hands, while Roman "pancratiatae," boxers and wrestlers of the arena, wore them spiked with iron that they might better claw the eyes out and ears off of their opponents.

and note how many pounds of fat have vanished.

Notice also that you have gained in energy —your skin is clearer—you feel younger in body—Kruschen will give any fat woman a joyous surprise.

But be sure it's Kruschen—your health comes first—and SAFETY FIRST is the Kruschen promise.

Get a jar of Kruschen Salts at any leading drugstore anywhere in America (lasts 4 weeks) and the cost is not more than 85c.
If this first jar doesn't convince you this is the easiest, SAFEST and surest way to lose fat—your money returned.

Get that Kruschen feeling of superb health, of spirited activity—no more gas, acidity or constipation.

"I've tried everything else and Kruschen is the only thing I get results from.
I've lost 20 lbs. so far and only have 15 lbs. more to lose. Even after I'm down to normal weight I'll continue Kruschen for it makes me feel great."

The Searchlight

By RAY LEE

In restoring the nation's unemployed there is a measure to be brought before the 73rd Congress, which is vital at this time. It must not fail. There are approximately 100,000 old and deserving railroad employees now in service who have earned their retirement through long and faithful service on American railroads. The arteries which have made and served our great country, what is their outlook? To most of them, there is nothing to look to. They will be retired from service because of age, physical condition, failing sight, hearing, etc.
Down the last mile, past the last signal—tossed out without means of support. Let's look at the other picture. There are 100,000 young and able bodied railroad employees who have been furlonged through no fault of their own, many of them forced to stand in bread lines and their families forced to seek aid from charitable institutions. Is there a solution for this problem? Yes—and that quick solution is the passage of the Hatfield-Keller pension bill No.
8817-H. R. 4231, introduced in the Senate by Senator Hatfield and in the House by Kent Keller of Illinois.
Each railroad employee would pay 2 1/2% of their wages regardless of age. The minimum disability paid is fifty dollars per month and the maximum pension is $240. The money would be deposited in the U. S.
Treasury, and disbursed from the U. S. Treasury. After all prosperity must be shared to be really kept,
and the passage of this most important bill by the regular session of the 73rd congress would provide these 100,000 old men a great buying power, and at the same time place 100,000 men back to work on part time, many of them out of employment as long as four years, and all having many years of seniority rights on railroads. The regular session of the 73rd Congress must pass this most deserving issue. IT CAN NOT fail at a time like this. It shall pass, because it's the human thing to do.

R. N. A. JUVENILES HAVE

CHRISTMAS PARTY
At the Juvenile's regular meeting on Dec. 9, a Christmas party was given them by the R. N. A. members.
Twenty-two juveniles were present and fourteen Royal Neighbors. Bunco was the past time. Mrs. Rowden furnished the prizes. The committee,

Mrs. M. Rice, Mrs. Christ and Mrs.
W. Wannemacher, served jello and cookies, and each child was given a stocking of nuts, candy and popcorn.
The table was very pretty with it's Christmas tree as a centerpiece and miniature candles at each place. A large tree graced the stage, and each child received a small gift taken from the tree. Oracle Mesenbrink served coffee and coffeeecake to the ladies.

Another feature of the meeting was Eleanor Stoltenberg's birthday.
She was nine years old Dec. 9 which made it her golden birthday. Her mother furnished a large birthday cake as a surprise to her. There are nine members that have not missed a meeting this year. The next meeting is January 13, at 1:30 p. m. in the Community hall, Tinley Park.

MOKENA

The regular monthly meeting of the St. John Evangelical Ladies Aid society was held yesterday afternoon in the church parlors. A program fitting to Xmas was enjoyed.
This was also the annual election of officers, which resulted as follows:
President, Mrs. Albert Braun; Vice president, Mrs. Herman Schweser;
Treasurer, Mrs. Aug. Pfeiffer; Asst.
Treasurer, Mrs. Milton Krapp and Secretary, Mrs. H. F. Mall.

Mrs. Emil Krapp who has been president of this society for the past 16 years, refused to accept the chair again. Two months ago she tendered her resignation from this office.

There was much sadness among the members when they learned of her giving up the leadership. Mrs.
Krapp has built up this society to the large membership it now has.
She was always a cheerful friend and helper to all who sought her aid.
She will be greatly missed from this leadership, but pledges support to all who take up the work after her.

This past year, this society gave $560 to the church.

Christmas Gifts

more earnestly for spiritual vision, purity, power. Christmas is a tie of spiritual rejoicing, a time of quietness and temperance, a time in which to note once again how far one is himself carrying out and extending the healing mission of Christianity.
It is evident that material gifts are often exchanged owing to precedent and formality, and that they call forth mainly a tedious sense of obligation and reciprocity. From Paul's sanctified heart welled up this desire
"I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift."
All that truly exists is Love and its spontaneous, unceasing manifestation in man; and as this ideal is cherished in thought it finds permanent expression in one's daily life.
Seeing another as well as one's self in the light of true manhood is a gift to be offered in token of reflected Truth and Love. This secret giving, this token of true Christianity, may well hallow every Christmas-tide.

"The Spirit bestows spiritual gifts, God's presence and providence," Mary Baker Eddy writes in "Miscellaneous Writings" (page 345). In this presence and this providence there is no room for sin, fear, lack, or false witnessing. It is in this spirit of sharing the best gifts that Christian Scientists meet together at Christmas, rejoicing not only in the Saviour's birth, but also in increasing evidences of their own and the world's new birth. Of God's impartation of spiritual gifts and man's response to these gifts
there is no beginning and no ending.
